Arrival of the Steamer Tennessee.

MARYLAND DELEGATION AT WASHINGTON.

Chief Clerk of the War Department.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The steamship Tennessee from San Juan via Aspinwall, March 10th, with 260 passengers, arrived this P. M. She connected with the Sierra Nevada. The latter boat passed the Orizaba Feb. 23d, 100 miles below San Francisco. All well.

The Tennessee left San Juan, March 7th. The Saratoga was lying there also.

Walker's position was unchanged. He still Rivas.

The Allies remain at St. George.

Walker had attacked the latter place twice without effect. A party of Rangers under Col. Cayces had been attacked by Costa Ricans and driven into San Juan. Col. C. left again on the 7th with a party of recruits from San Francisco.

The failure of Col. Sackridge's attempt on Castillo was owing to the cowardice of Col. Titus, who led the attacking party. Titus subsequently left Sackridge and went over to Rivas. Sackridge's main force is on Carlos Island, a short distance from Castillo, and he has also a garrison at Serrassigua.

The Aspinwall Courier says, while Titus was besieging Castillo, he held a parley with the enemy, who agreed to surrender provided he would permit messengers to pass his lines to inform Gen. Mora.

He agreed to this, but next day was attacked by a large force under Mora, and driven back with loss.

Titus, with other officers, went down the river in the steamer Rescue, to Greytown, when the boat was seized by an English officer, who offered protection to any one who wished to leave Walker's service. Titus used insulting language to the officer, and was seized and carried on board the English frigate Cossack, but was subsequently released.

The allies made two attacks on Rivas, March 4th, but were repulsed.

The British steamer Clyde, arrived at Aspinwall on the 8th, from Greytown, with 30 deserters from Walker.

The U. S. sloop-of-war Saratoga, was still at Greytown, and the St. Mary's at San Juan.

The sloop-of-war Decatur, arrived at Panama on the 9th.

Dates from Vaiparaiso and Callao are to the 26th ult.

Several vessels were loading guano at the Chinchas under the contract with Vevanco.

The Vevanco party in Peru were making little progress, having been defeated in a counter revolution at Tura.

The frigate Lou was at Paita, out of provisions and seamen.

Vevanco was planning at attack Wuxillo.

The Tennessee came over the Isthmus of Panama in two hours and a half.

WASHINGTON, March 20—A large delegation from Maryland had an interview with the President this morning, relative to the appointments for that State. At their caucus last night it was agreed to recommend Judge J. T. Mason, Collector, though it is understood the President had previously designated him for the office. The delegation were not agreed as to the rotation policy.

Wm. R. Dunkard, of Va., has been appointed Chief Clerk of the War Department.
