

NICARAGUA.—The reported successes of Walker's lieutenants Lockridge and Titus against the Costa Ricans on the San Juan river, Nicaragua, are considerably let down by the latest accounts. The engagement at Hipp's Point amounted to nothing, and the Costa Ricans retreated in good order, losing no arms and suffering no defeat, Castillo was not taken, and Col Lockridge did not capture 400 rifles. The truth stripped of all ornament, seems to be that the filibusters succeeded in getting up the river as far as the island of San Carlos; that the fort of that name in the possession of the Costa Ricans, was prepared to give them a warm reception, and that the plan of the Costa Ricans was to allow the filibusters to proceed a certain distance up the river, and then cut off their retreat, and use them up at their leisure. Nothing decisive can be known until the arrival of the next steamer, about a week hence.
