

Mr. Estrada Palma, widow of the good old Cuban president, is returning to the old home in Central Valley, N. Y., where he taught school in his years of exile. She is quoted as saying that it was the happiest time of her life. She has a pension of $5000 a year, with an additional $1000 a year for each of her children.