

ESCAPE OF THE NOTORIOUS DR. HINES.—By passengers arrived yesterday, we learn, says the New-Orleans Bulletin of January 15th, that Hines broke out of the state prison at Baton Rouge on the 12th inst. He was condemned to fourteen years imprisonment, for negro stealing. One of his fellow culprits who escaped with him, we hear, has been re-taken. He got possession of false keys, made his way by the aid of them to the segar shop in the upper part of the prison, cut a hole in the roof, and then let himself down by means of cords.

It seems that they kept company with the prison chains still fast to them, for some six miles back of Baton Rouge. On reaching the highlands the clank of the chains was heard by some negroes belonging to a plantation, who immediately gave the alarm. A pack of dogs were put upon the trail, and after a short run succeeded in capturing the other man, but Hines made his escape.

The above has been in type for some day's but left out for want of room. The mail of yesterday brings us the following ;—

From the New Orleans Bulletin of Jan 18.

DOCTOR HINES RECAPTURED.—We learn from Baton Rouge, that this notorious convict, after remaining in the swamp two or three days, being tired of longer fasting, came out to a plantation on the highlands and requested the negroes to take his irons off. The slaves at once took measures for securing him, in which they effectually succeeded, notwithstanding the Doctor offered resistance with a Bowie knife. He has again taken his proper place in the cells of the Penitentiaries.
