

BODY SNATCHING.

How Some Subjects Were Procured for Cincinnati Colleges.

CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 25.—Further investigations indicate that Jackson, the "body snatcher," has been engaged in the business for some time. The express office books show that Jackson shipped a similar box to William Morrock, Cincinnati, on the 24th of January last. February 1, one box to J. H. Waxton, Cincinnati; again to the last address February 4, March 4 and 10, April 3 and 4. No further shipments were made until October, when four were shipped. During November, three boxes had already been shipped addressed to J. W. Williams, Atlanta, the last having been shipped November 25, and is supposed to have contained the body of a negro woman who died Sunday. In Jackson's pocket was found a receipt signed by J. W. Williams, Atlanta, acknowledging the receipt of the body shipped Monday, and for which $25 was inclosed. The boxes were shipped as containing fish or furs.

Jackson is well known, and was a candidate for Alderman at the late election. Newton Carroll, the sexton, is a negro, and has been employed at the cemetery for the past three years. His brother and assistant escaped, but the police are on their track.
