SPIRIT OF THE MORNING PRESS. The Constitution treats at length upon what it considers the treachery of "The Bogus Forney Convention." and warns all true Democrats to stand aloof from its contaminating influences. The Constitution thinks that it must be extremely refreshing to the factionists who are building their hopes of success on alleged diffe. rences among Democrats, to observe the numerous proof which every day brings forth of the cort of "harmong" that exists and is likely to exist among themselves.

The Intelligencer publishes a communication from Washington Territory, showing that a question of boundary is about to arise bement in relation to a line that, in the settlement of the Oregon controversy, was left by the treaty for future determination.

WASHINGTON NEWS AND GOSSIP

THE NEW YORK TIMES AND THE WASHINGTON STAR .- The New York Times is indeed unfortunate in its various efforts to misrepresent the truth of the circumstances connected with the homicide of Philip Barton Key, and the current trial of Daniel E. Sickles for that act. Its malevolent perversion of facts to the end of prejudicing the public mind in favor of the prisoner have of late been persistently directed against the Star, the highest compliment it could accord to this journal. On Friday last, we had accord to a roose the utter falsity of rent trial of Daniel E. Sickles for that act. Its we had occasion to expose the utter falsity of its former allegations; and now it is our duty to truth, as well as to the Star, to say that there is naught but falsehood in the following a theoretic representation of the Democratic vote was only given to him as a choice of evils; his adroit management, and that of his friends, having prevented a Democratic congressional management. extract from its issue of Saturday last:

extract from its issue of Saturday last:

"It the New York Evening Post has been just as unfortunate with Mrs. Sockies's confession as with the Washington reporter. Without waiting to inquire at all into the facts of the case, it flew at once to the conclusion that Mr. Sickies was responsible for the publication of that most painful document, and after exercising a cheap virtue by suppressing in the evening what it very well knew that everbody had seen in the morning, endeavored to make the prisoner odious by fastening upon him this exposure of his unhappy wife. Bad the Post enjoyed the means or the disposition to keep itself informed of the facts in this matter, it would have learned that the publication of the confession is due to the proprietors of a petty Washington newspaper, the Star, of whose views throughout this case the Evening Post itself has been the docite echo. When the representatives of all the other journals had consented to withhold Mrs. Sickles's statement from the public, the persons in charge of the Star positively refused to do so."

The circumstances connected with the appearance of the paper purporting to be the confession of the wife of Sickles in the newspapers are as follows. Viz: It was offered by the device of the soft of the letter of the letter. Argin and graph office the slips thus furnished to them by its production. the defence for publication, after the contents of the defence for publication, after the contents of each succeeding slip had been duly sent over the wires. This request was cheerfully acceded and reading it aloud, handed it to Mr. Smith.

Thus, almost as soon as the counsel for the defence had finished copying it for publication in the northern newspapers generally, we had it "in hand" in the Star office. Subsequently. another copy, manifolded, was handed to us, It was made by a gentleman to whom, the counsel for defence handed the original, who made half a dozen copies for such other, journals as proposed to publish it at once, in the presence of all in the court-room, and immediately under the eves of the defence.

I mond, Va.

The signatures to the letter, and the letter itself, all appear to be in the same band-writing, and as you are wholly a stranger to me it is obvious that our relations cannot be marked by that frankness and confidence which they may require. sel for defence handed the original, who made (mond, Va. the eyes of the defence.

It was further understood among the repregontolives of the press, that the defence was quite as anxious to get it instantly before the public, as a desirable end to be accomplished for their cause, as the reporters to obtain copies for instant publication. We have no comments to make upon its precurement from the woman, or upon the taste manifested by the defence in thus putting it before the world. They did that thing doubtless for the benefit of their client. The idea of finding the net now reputdiated by the newspaper month-trigger of the contraction of their contest known to the whole history of the Democraty of the D

It grants to this Government the right to protect the transit route from filibuster invasion, without being called upon to do so by Niearagua; but, in case of protection from any other parties being necessary, this Government is not privileged to interfere until called upon by Nicaragua Virtually, it places the United States in the position of protector of the reigning party in Nica, of its authority to enforce Nicaragua into compliance with the demands of this Government. This now seems to be the only resort left.

THE THIANGULAR CONTEST IN THE SEVENTH DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA-MR. SHACKLEFORD'S SPEECHES -Yesterday, a very large concourse Species - Yesterday, a very large concourse attended at Culpeper Court-House, Va. to hear the expected discussion between the three aspirants for the seat from that district in the next Congress. It began shortly after 12 m., when Mr. Shackleford (Dem.) taking the stand comments on the Administration for various and the American parties, whose nominee he was no cally to his support. menced by explaining the circumstances and r which he entered the field last fall, then without an avowed competitor and availing himself of his right as a citizen and a Democrat to ask the suffrages of his fellow-citizens for the position. He went on to show that he was better entitled than his Democratic competitor to the support of his party, by instancing his steady devotion to it, and contrasting that with what he charged as the shortcomings and various tergiversations of the latter, Mr. Wm. Smith, who, he held, had only been elected up to this time, so far as the Democracy were concerned, by forcing himself on the party against its will.

Thus, in 1853, Mr. Shackelford urged. Mr. Smith had refused to abide the action of a convention; pressing his claims to the seat as earnestly as he had shortly before pressed his claims to a scat in the Senate of the United States from California. He was then voted for by a large portion of the Democracy-the speaker among them—only because no more acceptable Democrat was in the field. In 1855 occurred Mr. Smith's memorable coalition with the American party to compass the defeat of Mr. Wise and his election to be Governor of Virginia in that gentleman's stead, as the candidate of the Opposition, which, had it succeeded. Mr. Shackelford explained, would have resulted in the defeat of the Democratic party in the Presidential canyass of 1856. speaker among them-only because no more tween the United States and British Govern- didate of the Opposition, which, had it succeedthe Presidential canvass of 1856.

On that occasion, though the Democracy were ignorant of the extent and purpose of that coalition, so openly did he accord aid and comfort to the Opposition as that he received but about one-fourth the Democratic vote of the district for Congress. Mr. Shackleford described at length the circumstances under which the Democracy then felt it due to their a Demogratic congressional convention from meeting, as in 1853. He admitted that on that

As soon as the court (having perused it) handed it back to the counsel for the defence, and the argument upon the question of its admissibility was commenced, one of the counsel for the defence began to copy it for the reporters of the associated press; and as he handed to them each page of the copy, they sent it down to the telegraph office, where it was instantly telegraphed, as each page arrived, to the New York Times and other New York to the New York Times and other New York tion that a considerable portion of the Ameri-journals, for publication on the same afternoon, can party desired his nomination by their con-Seeing little chance to obtain it otherwise for the Star in time for the issue of the same after the star in time for the issue of the same after whether he had or had not written any such termon representations. ternoon, we requested permission of the report-letter, and he again asked whether he (Mr. ers for the associated press to copy in the tele-Smith) had written it, and if so, he demanded As Mr. Smith declined then to say whether

The first portion of the rejeinder of Mr. Shackleford was devoted to a reply to the speech of Mr. Thomas, and the balance to Mr. Smith. He accoved his confident belief in his own election, if Mr. Smith would cease to dis-tract the party by insisting on running without tract the party by insisting on running without the slightest hope of election; for, he urged, he (Mr. Smith) knew well that a large wing of the Democracy of the district were so dissatisfied with him as that under no consideration would they vote for him. He explained how and why it was that with but a single candidate in the field against him, his (Mr. Shackles ford's election over either Mr. Smith or Mr. Thomos was sure, and insisted that if the dis-Thomas was sure, and insisted that if the dis-Thomas was sure, and insisted that if the district be lost to the Democracy for the time being, the blame would properly rest upon Mr-Smith. He argued further, that the story about his purchase of a pair of Know Nothing breeches was rather a shirking of the issue, than a reply to his points urged to show the impropriety of continued confidence in him (Mr. Smith) on the part of the Democratic natty.

THE PARAGIAY FLEET .-- There is no foundation for the rumor that the vessels of this fleet have been ordered to Central America. They are now believed to be near home, and some of them at least, will have to undergo repairs and coppering before they are again sent to soa. Several of them will probably be ordered to the dulf when put in commission again.
